this morning a crowd surged around the an officer reached over with the handcuffs and seizing the slugger's arms pulled him out into the aisle. Sullivan resisted, and Muldoon put his head out of the window and cried to the crowd, "Gentlemen, I demand American protection." His patriotic wall was greeted with a variety of responses. Some cheered Sullivan and begged him to "Knock the copper out." Others cried, "Hurrah for the Nashville police," "Hit him with your club," etc. After a brief struggle Sullivan was taken from the car and hustled into a carriage. In the scuille he drew back to knock down a policeman when Chief Black stuck a pistol in his face and told him if he struck he (Black) would kill him. The officers next grabbed Charley Johnson, of Brooklyn, Sullivan's backer, who resisted vigorously, but finally began to cry with pain. During all this scrimm-sge Muldoon sat quietly by and was undisturbed. Cleary, Sullivan's other second, had in the excitement with one other named Lynch jumped off the ballot. Kilrain looks hadle but he is as far from the grave as badly, but he is as far from the grave as before the fight, in so far as the injuries he eceived in the battle are concerned. His face is badly bruised, both eyes blackened, and lip cut, but not severely, and his jaw gives evidence of some of the taps thereon from the brawny fist of Sullivan. Kilrain walks without assistance, but is far from frisky. He is also badly frightened and fears Gov. Lowry more than he did John L. He still looks to Mitchell and obeys his orders like a child. Mitchell opened with the statement that the fight was lost because Jake was not in shape. "He knew he was sick," he said, "and I asked him if he did not feel badly, and he deceived me by saying no. Now did'nt you, Jake?"

"I felt well enough to do him," drawled the fallen idol.
"The whole story in a nutshell," con tinued Mitchell, "can be quickly told. Jake had no time to get fit, and the sun knocked him out. The battle was fair and square, and we have no complaints to face is badly bruised, both eyes blackened,

"But did not Sullivan assist the sun in KANSAS CITY, July 11 .- The Times to knocking out Kilrain?"

"Some," said Mitchell. "Yes, Sullivan did get in some damaging punches in the third and I believe the seventh rounds; but it is a bloody shame to talk about dosing." continued Mitchell, "and about my leaving Jake because he was defeated. Jake will tell you he was not drugged, and as for leaving him, why I was looking out that we were not nabbed by the 'bobbies' in Mississippi and stood on the front platform to prevent the uncoupling of the train. Bud Masterson, of Denver, who is charged with twenty-two I ves, stood by me and promised to shoot the first who touched a coupling pin, and by the courtesy of the Associated Press we finally get into New Orleans on their special train. It was a forced courtesy, I know, but we couldn't help it. We had to get out of Mississippi, and quick, too."

The party proceeded to the hotel and Kilrain stripped to the waist to wash. His body appeared badly swollen and was covered with plasters. A big spot on his right side was created by rumors of Sullivan's arrest at Nashville, and Kilrain and party in order to avoid arrest hired carriages and drove overland in the direction of Shelbyville, thirty miles distant. The sheriff of this county to night received a telegram from Gov. Lowry, of Mississippi, offering $500 reward for the arrest of Kilrain and his party. As a rustler Mr. Maginnis can hold his own with the best mules strayed among the mountains and he went in search of them, says the Inyo ore, and a little further search brought to light four other sacks of ore. All the sacks were very rotten and had evidently been in the ground a long time. The miner caught his mules, went back to his camp for sacks, and then returned and got the ore. He carried it out to where it could be milled, and from the five sacks, each containing about seventy pounds of ore, he realized $1.300. Not long after finding the ore the miner met an Indian, who is well known in that region and who knew that the man had found the ore. The miner asked the Indian what had become of the men who had hidden the ore, and the Inpot, Mr. Maginnis said, is stored 50,000 pounds of wool, the result of a clip on a ranch near the town. Thousands of cattle are being turned into the Milk river valley, and before the snow files 100,000 head will be grazing there. Speaking of the dry season, Mr. Maginnis said he was surprised when he reached the great valley. Having heard reports from other pormen who had hidden the ore, and the Indian replied: "Mebbe so Indian heap kill ley. Having heard reports from other portions of Montana that everything was dried men are now searching for the ledge where the ore was taken from.
